Organize a national seminar by remote dialogue on:

Coastal tourism promotion mechanisms in Algeria

July 12, 2021

Seminar issue:

Today, tourism is one of the most important sources of national income for many countries, which can contribute to the achievement of the sustainable development of the Algerian state.

The Algerian coastal strip is rich in natural resources which allow it to be a pioneer in the field of coastal tourism, the sprawl of beaches and landscapes and the possibility of exploiting the coastal strip for coastal tourist circuits aboard ships, and the exploitation of fishing as a mechanism of tourist attraction, and the exploitation of the hotel infrastructure allows all of this to enhance this vital resource in the achievement of local and national development.

However, the richness of the Algerian coast is compensated by a lack of maximum exploitation of this vital resource in the equation of sustainable development.

Coastal tourism in Algeria today requires more than ever mechanisms to promote it within the framework of a global development based on a diversity of economic income.

These mechanisms vary between the legal texts related to tourism and the coast, and why not elaborate legal texts that regulate coastal tourism in a global way, and between the social, economic and cultural mechanisms that make it possible to improve the climate of coastal tourism by Algeria.

What are these legal, social, cultural and economic mechanisms to promote coastal tourism? How effective is it in achieving sustainable development for the state and coastal areas?

Objectives of the National Seminar:

This national seminar aims to seek mechanisms to achieve a global renaissance of the coastal tourism sector in Algeria through the participation of university researchers and actors in this field, exchanging points of view and proposing appropriate solutions to the problems facing confronted with coastal tourism in Algeria.
