Organise:

The First National Conference of Young Researchers (Hybrid Mode)

“Language Sciences and Specialised Languages/ESP,
From Theory to Practice”

April 28-29, 2026

As part of its scientific activities, the GSLSD Laboratory will host its first national conference for young researchers titled "Language Sciences and Specialised Languages/ESP, From Theory to Practice " on 28th and 29th April, 2026.

This conference offers an excellent opportunity for newly appointed university staff, candidates preparing their university habilitation and doctoral candidates to present their research.

In addition to showcasing their work, the event will serve as a dynamic platform for exchange and networking, bringing together researchers from various universities who specialise in language sciences and specialised languages/ESP.

The conference theme has been carefully designed to cover a wide range of topics and research areas within this field.

Objectives:

- Allow young researchers to discuss their rationales
- Provide a platform for young researchers to present their work in progress and receive constructive feedback
- Encourage young researchers to share knowledge and foster collaboration

Early career teachers/researchers, teachers preparing their Habilitation (Accreditation to Supervise Research) and doctoral students, together with their mentors, are invited to participate in this two-day conference by submitting a 150-word abstract, which falls within the scope of the following tracks

Tracks

- Language and AI: linguistic and pragmatic approaches
- specialty languages / ESP, EAP, EOP
- Language and the Internet and Internet linguistics
- Online communication and multilingualism
- The place of mainstream/ general linguistics in the university Curriculum
